Dear Ellie,

PALESTINE ACTION PROTESTORS

Thank you for your email of 12 December on behalf of yourself, Sian Berry MP, Carla Denyer MP, Adrian Ramsay MP, Baroness Bennett of Manor Castle, and Baroness Jones of Moulsecoomb about prisoners remanded in custody, for alleged offences relating to Palestine Action, who are refusing food.

I understand that MPs and Peers are concerned for these prisoners' welfare. I want to assure you that the safety of those who live and work in our prisons remains our paramount concern. As I am sure you will understand, the requirements of data protection legislation mean that I am unable to comment on the circumstances of individual prisoners.

Food refusal and hunger strikes are very concerning, and we encourage all prisoners to eat the food they are offered and accept healthcare and treatment. But unfortunately this is not a new issue. Food refusal is a weekly occurrence in our prisons with hundreds of cases each year. We have long-standing procedures in place to deal with it and ensure prisoner safety.

I have had assurances from His Majesty's Prison and Probation Service (HMPPS) that all cases of prisoner food refusal are being managed in accordance with the relevant policy, and with appropriate medical assessment and support, consistent with prisoner rights. If prisoners make complaints, they are processed through well established, long-standing processes under Rule 11 of the Prison Rules 1999.

When a prisoner refuses food, prison staff act immediately in accordance with Prison Safety Policy Framework which outlines HMPPS's policy for managing prisoners who refuse food and/or fluids. This includes notifying healthcare professionals, conducting regular welfare checks, and for healthcare staff to monitor the individual's health closely. Prison healthcare teams provide ongoing assessments and support, and Chaplaincy services are available where appropriate. Prison staff work to engage the individual to understand their concerns and seek resolution wherever possible. All actions are documented and reviewed to ensure compliance with HMPPS policy and the UN Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners.

The current policy on food refusals is set out in the Safety Policy Framework which came into effect in January 2025. The framework strengthened the previous Prison Service Instruction which was in place from 2012 and included the policy on the management of prisoners who refuse food and/or fluid. The new framework strengthens the policy including emphasising the importance of the early identification of food and/or fluid refusal to help identify and, if possible, alleviate the precipitating factor(s) and staff are required to make every effort to try and find out why the prisoner is refusing food and/or fluids and address the reasons for their refusal.

Healthcare in prisons is the responsibility of the NHS, with HMPPS working in partnership with health and social care partners. In accordance with Rule 20 of the Prison Rules 1999, Governors are required to work in partnership with local health care providers to secure the provision of access to the same quality and range of services as the general public receives from the NHS.

Ministers cannot comment on ongoing criminal proceedings. This principle applies to all criminal investigations and trials and helps ensure the integrity of those processes. The police, the CPS and the courts are all independent of the government; it is vital that these institutions are able to carry out their duties, and make decisions, free from political influence. I can reassure you, however, that the proscription of Palestine Action does not diminish the right to lawfully protest, or campaign on issues around Palestine or the Middle East. People are free to support Palestinian rights and sovereignty within the bounds of the law, and the police continue to work with organisers each week to facilitate safe, lawful protests.

I can confirm that all correspondence on this topic received by the department is being responded to appropriately within the usual timeframes.

Yours sincerely,
